	Behaviorist
1. What is the role of the therapist?	Therapist is a facilitator of learning. They provide a structured environment where clients can practice skills and receive feedback.
2. How is behavior change achieved?	Through reinforcement, punishment, and modeling. Clients learn by observing and practicing desired behaviors.
3. What are the primary goals of therapy?	To modify specific, measurable behaviors. Goals are often short-term and focused on skill acquisition.
4. How is progress measured?	Through direct observation and measurement of behavior frequency and intensity.
5. What are the limitations of this approach?	May not address underlying emotional or cognitive issues. Can be overly rigid and may not generalize to all situations.
