8. Page 17, lines 31-43: delete "There are two kinds of malice aforethought, express malice and implied malice. Proof of either is sufficient to establish the state of mind required for murder. The defendant had express malice if he or she unlawfully intended to kill. The defendant had implied malice if: 1. He or she intentionally committed the act; 2. The natural and probable consequences of the act were dangerous to human life in that the act involved a high degree of probability that it would result in death; 3. At the time he or she acted, he or she knew his or her act was dangerous to human life;"
9. Page 18, line 24: add "CALCRIM No. 521 H. Poison. The defendant is guilty of first-degree murder if the People have proved that the defendant committed murder by using poison. The defendant committed murder by poison if: 1. He or she deliberately gave Sears poison; AND 2. When giving the poison, the defendant intended to kill Sears or to inflict injury likely to cause Sears's death. Poison is a substance, applied externally to the body or introduced into the body, that can kill by its own inherent qualities. The heartstopper mushroom is a poison. The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing was first degree murder rather than a lesser crime. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty of first-degree murder."
