A TRIP AROUND THE DISTRICT

Orland Unified School District Weekly Updates

Learning Beyond the Classroom: Community-Based Learning in Action

At OUSD, we believe some of the best learning happens when students can step outside the classroom and experience it for themselves.

Throughout our schools, students are learning from local businesses, agricultural organizations, community partners and professionals who are opening their doors, and their expertise, to our students.

Recently, Fairview students got an up-close look at the fascinating world of honeybees through a visit from the Honeybee Discovery Center. Students had the opportunity to learn about bees, their important role in our ecosystem and the work involved in beekeeping.

Our C.K. Price Middle School CTE students took their learning into the field with a visit to Hart Farms, where they learned firsthand about the process of almond hulling. Seeing the agricultural process up close gave students a real-world connection to the agriculture and career opportunities that are right here in our community.

Our fourth graders also got to experience agriculture in action during Farm Day, hosted by the Glenn County Farm Bureau. Students rotated through hands-on learning experiences that helped them discover more about where our food comes from, the people who make agriculture possible and the many different careers connected to the industry.

And just yesterday, Orland High School students spent the day looking toward their futures during College and Career Day. Students had the opportunity to connect with colleges, career professionals, military representatives and community members while exploring the many paths available to them after high school.

These experiences are more than just field trips. They give students opportunities to ask questions, make connections, discover new interests and see how what they are learning in school connects to the world around them.

We are incredibly grateful to the local organizations, businesses, professionals and community members who continue to invest their time and knowledge in our students. When our community opens its doors to our students, it opens the door to possibilities.

Because learning doesn't stop when the bell rings, it comes to life when students can see it, experience it and connect it to their future.
