- Meet or exceed standard on CAASPP ELA and math²
- Complete at least one course that qualifies for an extra grade point.³
- Meet UC/CSU A-G requirements
- Earn all A and B grades.⁴

Advanced Transportation and Logistics

As a world leader in clean energy, California offers promising job opportunities for graduates interested in the intersection of vehicles, fuels, and new technologies. As higher standards for fuel efficiency are adopted, the need for workers in this area is expected to intensify.

When most people think about agriculture, they might only envision farming or ranching. But modern agriculture and its associated sciences have widespread impacts – from health and safety to biosecurity and environmental sustainability.

Business and Global Trade

The demand for employees with an education in business administration, marketing, accounting, trade and customs, personnel management, and related areas is strong – every industry needs people with the ability to organize, plan, and manage.

Energy, Construction and Utilities

Students who choose this career path set themselves up for job security in California and across the globe as this industry expands. Potential careers include architecture, engineering, inspection, and jobs in the construction trades, such as plumbing and carpentry.

Information communication technologies (ICT) affect how people work, communicate, organize, manage their lives, and more. California companies are global leaders in this dynamic and evolving space.

Public Safety and Service

Public safety is a good fit for students who care about making a difference in their communities and want to help people. This field includes police work, emergency response, and disaster relief.

Retail, Hospitality, and Tourism

The retail, hospitality, and tourism sector provides a wide range of career possibilities, from the sales room floor to head chef to hotel management.
